

Notes on Contributors

Jeffrey Kotyk (PhD, Leiden University, 2017) is presently researching the introduction and evolution of foreign astrology into East Asia, with particular interest in Buddhist astrology in Tang China and Heian Japan. He is originally from Winnipeg, Canada, but has spent much of his adult life in Asia and Europe studying Buddhism.

Ryan Jones is a doctoral candidate in the School of Religious Studies at McGill University. His research interests include Tibetan Buddhist historiography and its use in constituting religious lineages. His current research examines the formation of the Surmang Kagyu lineage in eastern Tibet during the sixteenth century.